The situation regarding the striking machinists of the Mount Clare shops of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad reached its crisis yesterday afternoon, when a conference was held with George L. Potter, third vice president of the railroad, and the delegates from the fourteen ships in the Baltimore and Ohio system. Tais delegation had a conference with J D. Harris a few days ago, who re-fused to accede to their demands. Vice President Potter also refused to accede to the demands of the machinists, stating that the piece-work system would be installed throughout the system whenever the officials saw fit. The men object to the piece system. The committee will report back to the heads of seven unions affected, and there is talk of calling out the machinists all along the line. There is also talk of a sympathetic str ke being ordered over the entire system of the machinists, blacksmiths, boilermakers, pipe fitters, and helpers within the next day or two.

Va., as she drew a revolver from some place of concealment and fired at Norman Pardue, a coal operator, who was standing in front of Shadyside Inn talking with a number of business associates.
The ball, after piercing Pardue's hand, struck George Montgomery, manager of the Montgomery mines, in the head, killing him instantly. The girl then ran to the house of a neighbor, where she was arrested. She made a confession, but would not explain the motive for but would not explain the motive lor her deed, except to say he bad wronged her in some manner. She said she had been hunting him all day, with the in-tention of killing him. "I'm sorry that I killed an innocent man," she said. "Would to God that it had struck Nor-man's worthless brain." With this the girl sank on her rough couch and sobbed
